PURPOSE OF THIS REPORT

Our public threat reporting began about six years ago when we first shared our findings about coordinated inauthentic behavior (CIB) by a Russian covert influence operation. Since then, we have expanded our ability to respond to a wider range of adversarial behaviors as global threats have continued to evolve. To provide a more comprehensive view into the risks we tackle, we've also expanded our regular threat reports to include other emerging threats and our detailed insights — all in one place, as part of the quarterly reporting series. In addition to sharing our analysis and threat research, we're also publishing threat indicators to contribute to the efforts by the security community to detect and counter malicious activity elsewhere on the internet (See Appendix).

We expect the make-up of these reports to continue to evolve in response to the changes we see in the threat environment and as we expand to cover new areas of our Trust & Safety work. This report is not meant to reflect the entirety of our security enforcements, but to share notable trends and investigations to help inform our community's understanding of the evolving threats we see. We welcome ideas from our peers across the defender community to help make these reports more informative, and we'll adjust as we learn from feedback.

For a quantitative view into our Community Standards' enforcement, including content-based actions we've taken at scale and our broader integrity work, please visit Meta's Transparency Center here: <https://transparency.fb.com/data/>.

What is Coordinated inauthentic behavior (CIB)?

We view CIB as coordinated efforts to manipulate public debate for a strategic goal, in which fake accounts are central to the operation. In each case, people coordinate with one another and use fake accounts to mislead others about who they are and what they are doing. When we investigate and remove these operations, we focus on behavior rather than content — no matter who's behind them, what they post or whether they're foreign or domestic.

Continuous CIB enforcement: We monitor for efforts to come back by networks we previously removed. Using both automated and manual detection, we continuously remove accounts and Pages connected to networks we took down in the past. See Section 5 for specific examples of our work to detect and counter recidivism.

SUMMARY OF OUR FINDINGS

In our Q2 Adversarial Threat report, we're sharing findings about three separate covert influence operations that violated our policy against CIB. They originated in Türkiye and Iran. We are also sharing detailed threat research and analysis about a China-based network that we estimate to be part of the largest cross-platform operation we've disrupted to date. And finally, this report includes new research into the so-called Doppelganger influence operation from Russia that we first took down in September of 2022.

1. Türkiye and Iran: We removed a network of 22 Facebook accounts, 21 Pages and seven Instagram accounts in Türkiye and Iran that targeted audiences in Türkiye. We took it down before it was able to build an audience. The people behind this activity created and operated a network of websites posing as independent news entities, while apparently relying on unwitting authors to create content. This campaign attempted to post links to its websites across multiple internet services including Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, Telegram, LinkedIn and Pinterest. We found this network as a result of our internal investigation into suspected coordinated inauthentic behavior in the region, and connected it to the network we took down in 2018.

2. Türkiye: We removed a network of 34 Facebook accounts, 49 Pages, 107 Groups and 12 Instagram accounts in Türkiye that targeted domestic audiences in that country. This campaign focused on running a dozen off-platform websites posing as independent news media that contain pay-per-click ads, likely to monetize traffic. The operation tried to amplify these domains across social media, including Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, and YouTube to make their content appear more popular than it was. We found this network as a result of our internal investigation into suspected coordinated inauthentic behavior in the region, and linked it to individuals in Türkiye, including those associated with Turkuaz Gazetesi, an online news outlet.

3. Türkiye: We removed a network of 60 Facebook accounts, 37 Pages, 2 Groups and 20 Instagram accounts in Türkiye that targeted domestic audiences in that country. The individuals behind this operation created fictitious brands that featured distinctive logos, profile photos, visual styles and hashtags across Facebook, Instagram, Twitter and TikTok. We found this network as a result of our internal investigation into suspected coordinated inauthentic behavior in the region, and linked it to four social media agencies: VOMM Creative, Skala Medya, TMSC Media and Bin945 Creative Works. Our assessment benefited from reviewing public reporting on some of this activity.

4. China: We took down thousands of accounts and Pages that were part of what appears to be the largest known cross-platform covert influence operation in the world. It was active on more than 50 platforms and forums, including Facebook, Instagram, X (formerly Twitter), YouTube, TikTok, Reddit, Pinterest, Medium, Blogspot, LiveJournal, VKontakte, Vimeo, and dozens of smaller platforms and forums. This campaign was run by geographically dispersed operators across China who appeared to be centrally provisioned with internet access and content. It included positive commentary about China and its province Xinjiang and criticisms of the United States, Western foreign policies, and critics of the Chinese government including journalists and researchers. Our investigation found links to individuals associated with Chinese law enforcement. We were also able to link this network to the so-called “Spamouflage” operation and its many separate clusters of spammy activity that Meta and our peers have been taking down since 2019.

5. Russia: We’re publishing new threat research into the Russian operation that we first disrupted a year ago – it mimicked the websites of mainstream news outlets in Europe to post fake articles about Russia’s war in Ukraine. We shared our detailed threat research far and wide last year – including attribution to two Russian firms – so that others can take appropriate action too. Recently, these companies were sanctioned by the EU. Because we know that these deceptive campaigns are persistent and often try to come back — if not on our platforms, then somewhere else – our work to counter them goes beyond our initial takedown. Our latest findings show that this campaign has continued to pursue its single mission – to weaken support for Ukraine against Russia’s invasion. It has expanded beyond its initial targeting of France, Germany and Ukraine itself to now also include the US and Israel. Among its most recent domain spoofing targets were the Washington Post, Fox News, and NATO. We assess this network to be the largest and the most aggressively persistent Russian-origin operation we’ve taken down since 2017.

Domain registration abuse: Four out of five covert influence operations in this report ran websites that pose as independent news outlets, including the Russia-based campaign that spoofed mainstream media organizations. While we continue to block malicious domains engaged in violating activity from being shared on our services, enforcements on each individual platform can only go so far in disrupting these internet-wide campaigns while their websites remain live. Transparency and cross-society responses are key to tackling these malicious efforts to manipulate public debate, because each of the tech platforms, researchers, media and government entities, domain registrars and regulators have a unique but limited view into individual elements of these deceptive campaigns. We’re sharing our policy and enforcement recommendations for tackling domain registration abuse across the internet and multiple threat types.

Türkiye and Iran

We removed 22 Facebook accounts, 21 Pages and seven Instagram accounts for violating our policy against coordinated inauthentic behavior. This network originated in Türkiye and Iran and targeted audiences in Türkiye.

The people behind this activity operated a network of websites posing as independent news entities where they posted primarily in Turkish about news and current events in the Middle East region, including supportive commentary about Iran and Palestine; verbatim statements by Ayatollah Ali Khamenei; and critical commentary about Israel, the United States, the Turkish government and the Justice and Development Party (AKP) in Türkiye. The operation appeared to have relied on unwitting authors to create content. This campaign attempted to post links to its websites across multiple internet services including Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, Telegram, LinkedIn and Pinterest.

The individuals behind this network used fake accounts – some of which were detected and removed by our automated systems – to manage Pages, post content, and drive people to their off-platform domains. We removed them before they were able to build an audience.

We found and removed this network as a result of our internal investigation into suspected coordinated inauthentic behavior in the region, ahead of the elections in Türkiye. Our investigation found links between this activity and the network we took down in 2018.

- Presence on Facebook and Instagram: 22 Facebook accounts, 21 Pages, and seven Instagram accounts
- Followers: About 11,000 accounts followed one or more of these Pages and about 17,000 accounts followed one or more of these Instagram accounts.
- Advertising: About $670 in spending for ads on Facebook, paid for mostly in Turkish lira and US Dollars

02

Türkiye

We removed 34 Facebook accounts, 49 Pages, 107 Groups and 12 Instagram accounts for violating our policy against coordinated inauthentic behavior. This activity originated in Türkiye and targeted domestic audiences in that country.

This campaign focused on running a dozen off-platform websites posing as independent news media where they posted content in Turkish about current events in the country, including politics, critical commentary about the opposition, supportive commentary about the AKP, sports, entertainment, and other non-political topics. These “news” websites appear to contain pay-per-click ads, likely to monetize traffic. The operation then tried to amplify these domains across social media, including Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, and YouTube to make their content appear more popular than it was. The operation appears to have used web tools to automate posting on their websites and on social media.

The people behind this activity relied on a combination of compromised, duplicate and fake accounts – some of which were detected and removed by our automated systems – to manage Pages and Groups, and post and like their own content. Some of these Groups went through significant name changes over time and appeared to have been acquired from others.

We found and removed this network as a result of our internal investigation into suspected coordinated inauthentic behavior in the region, ahead of the elections in Türkiye. Although this operation attempted to conceal their identities and coordination, our investigation found links to individuals in Türkiye, including those associated with Turkuaz Gazetesi, an online news outlet. We also found links to a cluster of spammy activity we had previously taken action against for violating our policy against inauthentic behavior by using abusive audience building tactics.

- Presence on Facebook and Instagram: 34 Facebook accounts, 49 Pages, 107 Groups and 12 Instagram accounts

- Followers: About 1.9 million accounts followed one or more of these Pages, around 1 million accounts joined one or more of these Groups and about 125,000 accounts followed one or more of these Instagram accounts.
- Advertising: About $21,000 in spending for ads on Facebook, paid for mostly in Turkish lira.

Türkiye

We removed 60 Facebook accounts, 37 Pages, 2 Groups and 20 Instagram accounts for violating our policy against coordinated inauthentic behavior. This activity originated in Türkiye and targeted domestic audiences in that country.

The people behind this activity used a combination of authentic, duplicate and fake accounts - some of which were detected and disabled by our automated systems - to admin Pages, post and like their own content. Likely in an attempt to evade our detection and enforcement, this network transferred management of its Pages from one fake account to another over time. Some of these fake accounts used profile photos likely generated using machine learning techniques like generative adversarial networks (GAN).

The individuals behind this operation created a number of fictitious brands that featured distinctive logos, profile photos, visual styles and hashtags across Facebook, Instagram, Twitter and TikTok. They posted primarily in Turkish about politics and current events in Türkiye and the region, including critical commentary about the opposition, European Union and United States, and supportive commentary about the AKP and its policies.

We found and removed this network as a result of our internal investigation into suspected coordinated inauthentic behavior in the region, ahead of the elections in Türkiye. Our assessment benefited from public reporting about a portion of this cross-internet activity. Although the people behind it attempted to conceal their identities and coordination, our investigation found links to four social media agencies: VOMM Creative, Skala Medya, TMSC Media and Bin945 Creative Works.

- Presence on Facebook and Instagram: 60 Facebook accounts, 37 Pages, 2 Groups and 20 Instagram accounts.

- Followers: About 1.3 million accounts followed one or more of these Pages, about 30,000 accounts joined one or more of these Groups, and about 355,000 accounts followed one or more of these Instagram accounts.
- Advertising: About $667,000 in spending for ads on Facebook, paid for mostly in Turkish lira.

China

IN-DEPTH RESEARCH & ANALYSIS

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

We removed 7,704 Facebook accounts, 954 Pages, 15 Groups and 15 Instagram accounts for violating our policy against coordinated inauthentic behavior. This network originated in China and targeted many regions around the world, including Taiwan, the United States, Australia, the United Kingdom, Japan, and global Chinese-speaking audiences.

We began this investigation after reviewing public reporting about off-platform activity that targeted a human-rights NGO in late 2022. Following this lead, we were able to uncover a large and prolific covert influence operation which was active on more than 50 platforms and forums, including X (formerly Twitter), YouTube, TikTok, Reddit, Pinterest, Medium, Blogspot, LiveJournal, VKontakte, Vimeo, and dozens of smaller platforms and forums, as well as Facebook and Instagram.

On our platform, this network was run by geographically dispersed operators across China who appear to have been centrally provisioned with internet access and content directions. Many of their accounts were detected and disabled by our automated systems. We assess that this likely led the people behind it to increasingly shift to posting its content on smaller platforms and then trying to amplify it on larger services in hopes to maintain persistence. We have not found evidence of this network getting any substantial engagement among authentic communities on our services. In fact, one of the key tactics we've seen them use was acquiring spammy Pages whose inauthentic following likely came from fake engagement farms around the world, notably in Vietnam, Bangladesh and Brazil. This meant that Pages that mainly posted in Chinese and English were almost exclusively followed by accounts from countries outside of their target regions.

This network typically posted positive commentary about China and its province Xinjiang and criticisms of the United States, Western foreign policies, and critics of the Chinese government including journalists and researchers. To illustrate the range of content themes pursued by this network, we've included sample headlines in the Appendix.

While this network's activity on our platform mainly consisted of spammy sharing of links, in addition to memes and text posts, our investigation identified notable distinctive errors, behavioral patterns and operational structure that allowed us to connect it to a number of more complex and long-running large clusters of activity across the internet. As we worked to understand the full scope of this activity across the board, we were also able to identify links between this network and many separate clusters of spammy activity we've been detecting and removing under our Inauthentic Behavior policy since August 2019 which are known in the security community as "Spamouflage."<sup>1</sup> (For the purposes of this report, we'll refer to this latest China-based operation as Spamouflage). Taken together, we estimate Spamouflage to be the largest known cross-platform covert influence operation to date.

Although the people behind this activity tried to conceal their identities and coordination, our investigation found links to individuals associated with Chinese law enforcement.

TAKEDOWN BY THE NUMBERS

- Presence on Facebook and Instagram: 7,704 Facebook accounts, 954 Pages, 15 Groups and 15 Instagram accounts
- Followers: About 560,000 accounts followed one or more of these Pages, fewer than 10 accounts joined one or more of these Groups and about 870 accounts followed one or more of these Instagram accounts. We assess that this network's Pages were likely acquired from spam operators with built-in inauthentic followers primarily from Vietnam, Bangladesh and Brazil – none of which we assess to be the targets of this operation.
- Advertising: At least $3,500 in spending for ads related to this operation's activity on Facebook, paid for mostly in Chinese yuan, Hong Kong dollars and US dollars.

KEY TRENDS

1. CENTRALIZED CONTROL, DECENTRALIZED OPERATORS

Our investigation found that the Spamuouflage network is run by geographically dispersed operators across China who appear to be centrally provisioned with internet access and content directions.

We identified multiple distinct clusters of fake accounts that were run from many different parts of China. Their behavior suggested that they were operated by groups who may have worked from a shared location, such as an office. Each cluster worked to a clear shift pattern, with bursts of activity in the mid-morning and early afternoon, Beijing time, with breaks for lunch and supper, and then a final burst of activity in the evening.

Image:

Posting times, Monday through Sunday, time zone GMT +8

While some of these fake accounts were run from hundreds of miles apart, they repeatedly shared the same proxy internet infrastructure - often in the United States, likely in an attempt to disguise their origins.

These clusters of activity also repeatedly shared identical content across many internet platforms - not just links and articles, but short, “personal” comments as well. These comments were designed to appear unique and personal, using terms like “I” and “we” and referring to individual experiences and beliefs. However, hundreds of different accounts made the same “personal” comments on many different services and websites, indicating that they were likely centrally tasked with posting these. Occasionally, fake accounts would post a comment together with what appears to have been a serial number, suggesting that it may have been copy-pasted from a numbered list.

Image

Top to bottom: Identical “personal” posts on X (aka Twitter), Reddit, Canadian forum bbs[.]51[.]ca, and Tumblr.

None of these posts appeared to have attracted much engagement from real people.

2. PIVOT TO SMALLER PLATFORMS

When Spamouflage was first uncovered in 2019, it typically focused on Facebook, Twitter and YouTube. Over time, as platforms began detecting and blocking these spammy efforts, the operation began pivoting to prioritizing smaller platforms, including local forums in Asia and Africa.

Much of the activity we recently disrupted on Facebook consisted of link shares to articles that the operation had seeded on other forums.

The websites and forums used by this operation are remarkable for their diversity and geographical spread: we've identified over 50 platforms and forums where we assess this campaign was active. Beyond posting on Facebook and Instagram, Spamouflage made heavy use of Medium, X (aka Twitter), Reddit, YouTube, Vimeo and Soundcloud. It ran accounts on Quora - sometimes replying with pro-China comments to questions that had nothing to do with the topic. It posted hundreds of cartoons on Pinterest, Pixiv, and art website artstation[.]com.

We also identified likely-Spamouflage accounts on TikTok, Blogspot and LiveJournal, and the Russian platforms VKontakte and Odnoklassniki. Further afield, we identified likely activity on Nigerian forum Nairaland[.]com, Indonesian forum kaskus[.]co[.]id, Chinese financial forum nanyangmoney[.]com and Australian local forum Melbournechinese[.]net.

Image

Clockwise from top left, a video headlined "敦促蔡英文及其軍政首腦投降書" ("Urging Tsai Ing-Wen and her military leaders to surrender") posted by likely Spamouflage accounts on Medium, Quora, Pinterest (linking to a since-deleted YouTube video) and Nairaland[.]com (linking to a video on Odnoklassniki that was still live as of August 1, 2023).

Note the incongruous reply on Quora to a completely unrelated question, and number 20 before the Pinterest post.

Spamouflage content criticizing Chinese virologist Yan Limeng – a frequent target of the operation – also appeared on TripAdvisor. Another frequent target of this operation – Chinese-American journalist Jiayang Fan – appeared to have been mentioned on the forum of Luxembourg newspaper Luxemburger Wort. Spamouflage also appeared to post in the comments section of the Financial Times' Chinese language publication, FTChinese. Some of this content has since been likely deleted by the admins of these websites.

3. ECHOES OF “SECONDARY INFEKTION”

As we reviewed our findings on tactics, techniques and procedures (TTPs) used by Spamouflage over the years, we noted some distinct similarities with the Russian network we first exposed in 2019 which was later dubbed “Secondary Infektion”. While the reasons behind these parallels are unclear, it is possible that CIB operators learn from one another, including as a result of public reporting about covert influence operations by our industry and security researchers.

First, Spamouflage was the most cross-platform operation we've investigated since Secondary Infektion. And both often planted their content on smaller platforms before attempting to share links to it on larger ones.

Second, both operations posted content in an unusual range of languages: Secondary Infektion used at least seven (Russian, English, German, French, Spanish, Swedish, Ukrainian); and Spamouflage content came primarily in Chinese and English in addition to French, and smaller volumes in languages including Spanish, Russian, Japanese, Korean, Thai, Indonesian, Filipino, German, Finnish, Portuguese, and even Latin and Welsh.

Third, Spamouflage, at times, used a very atypical mix of distinct forums that Secondary Infektion also utilized, which have been rarely or never seen to be used by any other known influence operations. These include British student forum thestudentroom[.]co[.]uk and blogging platforms scoop[.]it and cont[.]ws.

Fourth, both operations engaged in very elaborate laundering of narratives. We found an instance when Spamouflage went through multiple phases in its efforts to ultimately claim that the US was the origin of COVID-19:

- It first appears to have created and published a 66-page “research paper” on website zenodo[.]org. The paper was remarkable for its errors, including consistently misspelling the names of key protagonists.
- Then, Spamouflage posted two distinct videos on YouTube and Vimeo to promote this “research”.
- Then, it created an article that cited this “research” and embedded these videos to claim that the US had been “hiding the truth about the origin of the virus from the outside world”. It planted this article across multiple forums, including LiveJournal, Tumblr and Medium.

- Finally, it used accounts on Facebook, X, Quora, Reddit, Google Groups, LiveJournal, Tumblr and smaller forums to amplify these links.

Notably, unlike Spamouflage, Secondary Infektion was much more careful in its operational security (OpSec) and avoided re-using the same accounts. Typically, the Russian operation used a single fake account to post only one article, and then abandoned it - sometimes within minutes of creating it. Spamouflage, on the other hand, would typically use each fake account to post each article 5-10 times in a row over a few days. This allowed it to post more, but at the cost of lower OpSec. Since the operation appeared to have used accounts on many different platforms in the same way, this meant that any one Spamouflage article could feature hundreds of times across Medium, Reddit, YouTube, Quora, Pinterest, Tumblr, and smaller platforms.

Image

Posts of a single Spamouflage article by a single Medium account, February 2023. The same article was posted repeatedly on other Medium accounts, and also accounts on Quora, Reddit, and a wide range of blogging platforms.

This pattern of "spraying" the same article across many different platforms and accounts gave Spamouflage a considerable degree of resilience, because it would require action by many different platforms to take down its articles for good. However, this may not have been the operators' intention: they may simply have been trying to achieve a production quota for their campaign.

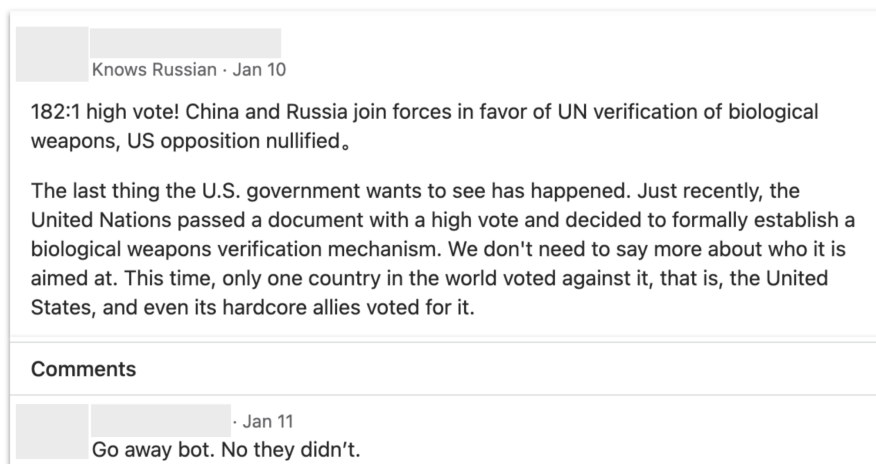

Notably, the operation's use of highly distinctive headlines makes it particularly vulnerable to cross-platform, open-source investigation. Headlines with typos and language mixes, such as "Rummors and truth of COVID-19" and "棋子或弃子", or with unique formulations such as "Queen Elizabeth II Dead or Related to New Prime Minister Truss?” and “Guo Wengui's Lies, Little Ant's Drugs” represent unique indicators that open-source researchers can use to find additional connected activity across the internet.

We’ve shared threat indicators with our industry peers and the research community. To enable further open-source research and illustrate the operation’s scope, we’re publishing a selection of headlines that we can attribute to this operation with confidence.

4. HIGH VOLUME, LOW REACH

Despite the very large number of accounts and platforms it used, Spamouflage consistently struggled to reach beyond its own (fake) echo chamber. Many comments on Spamouflage posts that we have observed came from other Spamouflage accounts trying to make it look like they were more popular than they were. Only a few instances have been reported when Spamouflage content on Twitter and YouTube was amplified by real-world influencers, so it is important to keep reporting and taking action against these attempts while realizing that its overall ability to reach authentic audiences has been consistently very low.

Image

Top: Operation post on Quora, alleging a UN vote against the United States.

Bottom: The only reply.

This is likely in part due to the operation’s poor quality control. As we mentioned earlier, many of Spamouflage’s accounts and Pages appear to have been purchased from third parties in other countries, notably Vietnam and Bangladesh. Some of these Pages used to post ads unrelated to CIB for products like phone cases, lingerie, clothing or children’s accessories, prior to them being acquired and engaging in Spamouflage-related activity. The operators often appear to have begun using these accounts and Pages without making any alterations - leading to highly idiosyncratic behaviors where, for example, a Page that had been posting lingerie ads in Chinese abruptly switched to English and posted organic content about riots in Kazakhstan.

Similar flaws characterized the operation’s content. A Medium account linked to the operation posted the same article in Chinese and English criticizing New Yorker journalist Jiayang Fan, but the Chinese headline was followed by the English text, and vice versa. Operation posts misspelled key names - “Freud” instead of “Floyd”, “Lv Pin” instead of “Lü Pin” (a Chinese feminist activist). The operators appear to have auto-translated the captions on their cartoons without proofreading them, so that an article attacking the “Safeguard Defenders” (a human-rights group) was accompanied by a cartoon calling them the “Protection guard”.

LOOK BACK AT ‘DOPPELGANGER’S ATTEMPTS TO STAY AFLOAT ACROSS THE INTERNET

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Last year, we shared our threat research into the CIB network focused on supporting Russia’s invasion of Ukraine, dubbed Doppelganger, that operated across the internet, including running a large network of websites spoofing legitimate news outlets. In December, we attributed it to two companies in Russia: Structura National Technology and Social Design Agency (Агентство Социального Проектирования). We banned these firms from our services. They were also later sanctioned by the EU.

This lookback includes our latest threat research and new analysis of this campaign’s activity across many services and websites. Having observed its attempts to adapt to detection by platforms and researchers for about a year, a few big-picture insights stood out to us about Doppelganger’s approach:

Persistence: We assess this campaign to be the largest and most aggressively persistent covert influence operation from Russia that we’ve seen since 2017. Since our initial disruption and continuous scrutiny by platforms and researchers, Doppelganger continued to create new domains in an attempt to evade detection (see more details on changes in TTPs further down). Given the nature of this operation and the type of entities behind it, this is expected behavior across our industry with any CIB network we each take down. In addition to ongoing detection by our automated systems, our team has been monitoring and taking action against these recidivist attempts, and sharing findings with our peers and with the public. In total, we’ve blocked over 2,000 of the operation’s domains from being shared on our platform: these are included in the Appendix to help the researcher community analyze this activity across the internet. We also blocked tens of thousands of attempts to run fake accounts and Pages on our platforms.

High input – low output: This operation stands out for the sheer wastefulness of its large-scale efforts. We expect Doppelganger to keep at it with its “smash-and-grab” approach by throwing a large amount of resources – even if it leads to a very high detection rate and loss of assets, as we described in September. But it may also indicate a sustained effort aimed at influencing the ultimate client(s) in addition to the target audiences online. Such behavior is typical for influence operations for hire run by marketing (and IT) firms like this one. While they can provide plausible deniability to their customers, they also have an interest in continuing low-efficacy efforts as long as they keep getting paid. They are also incentivized to exaggerate their own effectiveness, engaging in client-facing perception hacking to burnish their credentials with those paying them. It is critical to analyze the impact of these deceptive efforts (or lack of it) based on evidence, not on the actors’ own claims or their persistence, while continuously strengthening our whole-of-society defenses across the internet.

Expanding targeting, yet single mission: With Doppelganger focusing on weakening support for Ukraine against the Russia invasion, this operation appears to be trying to pick off some of Ukraine’s international allies over time. Judging by the origin of the organizations that this operation spoofed, among other factors, this Russian campaign has expanded beyond targeting France, Germany and Ukraine itself for the first 8+ months to include the US and Israel earlier this year. While the exact reasoning behind this expansion is unknown, it likely reflects the fluid tasking of this operation (by its clients) and its single-minded mission.

Domains are all the rage: A large set of websites filled with anti-Ukraine and pro-Russia “news” stories have been the center of this operation – it is where the firms behind Doppelganger try to drive people from across the internet (see details on TTPs further down). While we (and other research teams) have continued to publicize these spoofing domains to enable further research and enforcement, many of them remain live, actively adding “news” articles. Blocking these domains from being shared on each individual platform can only go so far to disrupt this internet-wide campaign while its websites continue operating. See more on Meta’s policy and enforcement recommendations on tackling domain registration abuse across many threat types in Section six.

DOPPELGANGER: BACKGROUND

Launched soon after Russia’s full-scale invasion of Ukraine, Doppelganger created a small number of sophisticated websites that spoofed the appearance of mainstream European news outlets, and then spammed links to those sites using simple fake accounts on many social media platforms, including Facebook, Instagram, Telegram, X (formerly Twitter), and even LiveJournal, among others. In parallel, it created fake petitions, videos, cartoons, and a media “brand” called RRN which posted original pro-Russian and anti-Ukrainian content in six languages on its own website. We first reported on RRN in our September 2022 threat report.

LATEST TRENDS

In the last year, Doppelganger continued to evolve its tactics, techniques and procedures (TTPs), in response to detection and aggressive enforcement. Here are the latest trends we've identified.

1. THE US AND ISRAEL COME INTO FOCUS

While Germany, France and Ukraine remain the most targeted countries overall for this operation, recently, Doppelganger has added the United States and Israel to its list of targets. It has done so by spoofing the domains of major news outlets in the US and Israel, publishing articles criticizing American policies, and then spam-posting links to those articles across Facebook and X (formerly Twitter). These domains spoof the Washington Post, Fox News, and Israeli news sites Mako[.]co[.]il and walla[.]co[.]il.

These spoofed Fox News and Washington Post domains post critical commentary about Ukraine's President Zelensky and, to a lesser extent, US President Biden and the US policy on Ukraine. Some of the social-media comments that it used to accompany these articles dwelt on policy differences between Democrats and Republicans, but most criticized Ukraine to Americans without regard for their political leanings.

Image

Top: Spoof of Fox News' website on foxnews[.]cx, created by Doppelganger to target Ukraine on the Fourth of July. Note the story claims to be published under the byline of a real Fox news author.

Bottom: For comparison, screenshot of the authentic Fox News website, featuring an article by the same author on the same day.

The articles on spoofed Israeli news outlets accused the United States and European countries of interfering in Israel, and tied these accusations back to Western support for Ukraine. For example, one article criticized Germany for supplying arms to Ukraine, while another accused the United States of triggering the Ukraine war to undermine the economies of European countries and Israel.

Some of these spoofs were particularly elaborate. Notably, one Washington Post article was based on a faked Russian-language video which purported to show President Zelensky admitting that he was a puppet of the CIA. The article was presented as a question-and-answer interview, and used the byline and timestamp of a genuine interview by the Washington Post’s Berlin bureau chief that was published the same day. The operation then shared the link to this fake Washington Post article on social media as “evidence” of American interference in Ukraine. It received no engagement on our platform.

Image

Top: Spoofed article by Doppelganger on washingtonpost[.]It'd purporting to show what appears to be a non-existent “interview” with Ukraine’s President.

Bottom: For comparison, an authentic article on the Washington Post website by the real author on the same day.

The people behind Doppelganger appear to be agile in quickly responding to world events in real time as they fit them into the operation’s key narrative about the war in Ukraine. For example, a spoofed version of French newspaper Libération reacted to anti-police protests in France by claiming that the country had been “infected by the Ukrainian virus of color revolutions”. An article on the spoofed website of the Israeli news portal mako[.]co[.]il reacted to Western criticism of a judicial reform in Israel by accusing the United States of planning a “color revolution” in Israel. This content did not appear to attract authentic engagement, but it illustrates a threat actor quickly responding to events on the ground in countries it targeted.

2. IMPERSONATING GOVERNMENT WEBSITES

Other recent Doppelganger websites have spoofed government institutions and news outlets in Europe. Over the past few months, we’ve identified and blocked spoofs of the German police, Polish and Ukrainian governments, NATO (in English, French and Ukrainian), and the French Foreign Ministry, as well as European news outlets like RBC (Ukraine), and Sueddeutsche (Germany).

Most of these spoofed “government” websites focused on promoting claims that Western support for Ukraine would lead to higher taxes, greater insecurity, or lower standards of living. They were relatively sophisticated spoofs that included redirects to the authentic websites, likely to make them look more convincing, and used official photos from government sources in their posts. They made mistakes – for example, the fake NATO French- and Ukrainian-language sites copied the alliance’s English-language website, rather than its French and Ukrainian versions.

Image

Top right: Ukrainian-language version of the spoofed NATO website. Note, again, the English menu bar.

Bottom right: Screenshot of an authentic NATO article: note that the banner and menu bar are in French.

3. USE OF REDIRECT URLs

Creating elaborate spoofed sites and articles is a labor-intensive effort. Likely in response to detection and blocking of these websites, Doppelganger has also deployed a far higher number of “backup” domains. Each time we’ve blocked one of its main spoofs, Doppelganger has responded by putting these backup domains in between to conceal the final destination of these links. These urls are meant to redirect to the spoofed site - typically in multiple hops, using one backup domain to redirect to another, which then redirects onwards to the final destination. We continue to block those too.

Doppelganger’s use of domains evolved through four phases:

- First, from June through mid-September 2022, it typically posted links directly to its spoofed domains on social media.
- Second, shortly after we initially disrupted its activity and blocked its domains for the first time, it began registering its own backup domains. Some had names that related to the outlet they were spoofing, but with increasing degrees of typos: for example, tonline[.]life (a spoof of the genuine t-online[.]de), then t-onlinr[.]life, then t-onlin[.]life, and so on. Others had more generic titles, but also featured increasing typos: for example, the name “Offene Meinung” (public or open opinion) came out progressively as offinemainung[.]info, offinetaiunng[.]space, affinetmaiunng[.]website and affinetmiunng[.]website.
- Third, in late October 2022, it began using redirects that were subdomains of the site tilda[.]ws.
- Fourth, from the end of 2022 onwards, it pivoted to using likely compromised domains whose names bore no relation to the focus of this operation and its content. These included domains like coednakedfootball[.]xyz, gonorrhoea-early-signs[.]com, kinocasino[.]net, powerwasher-reviews[.]com and transformationbookclub[.]com.

Image

Tweet by an account that exclusively shared URLs associated with Doppelganger. Note how it replies to a news article about a rescue at sea with a comment on U.S. politics and the Ukraine war, accompanied by the domain “stretchtra[.]shop”.

As with its backup domains, Doppelganger’s social-media activity appeared to prioritize quantity over quality, making minimal effort to look convincing. For example, few of its accounts have any distinguishing features beyond a name and a profile photo, while many of its Pages have names that simply combine two adjectives, like “Frizzy Impeccable”. Doppelganger appears to have abandoned any effort at investing into audience-building, putting its main focus into endlessly rebuilding its stock of basic fake accounts and Pages after we take them down. We have not observed this network’s fake accounts and Pages being amplified by real people.

We’ll continue disrupting this large-volume but low-impact activity on our platform, monitoring for further developments and sharing our findings with our industry peers, researchers and the public.

Raising Cross-Internet Defenses Against Domain Name Abuse

POLICY & ENFORCEMENT RECOMMENDATIONS

From our years of disrupting malicious activity across our services, we know that adversarial threats rarely target just one platform. As part of malicious cross-platform campaigns, threat actors routinely exploit the global domain name system to deceive people into visiting imposter news sites, clicking on phishing links, installing malware, and falling for other scams. While we regularly block and publicize these malicious campaigns, they often continue to persist across the broader internet. This is because the mechanisms for redressing abusive domain names are not sufficient for the scale of the abuse that our industry and researchers see online today.

THE DOPPELGANGER EXAMPLE

The Russia-based covert influence operation Doppelganger (Section five) we describe earlier in this report is a good example of how bad actors use malicious domains to insulate themselves from enforcement.

This cross-internet campaign runs a number of highly-developed websites that spoof the appearance of real news outlets and government institutions. It uses well-known techniques like typosquatting to trick people into believing these spoofs are legitimate by using domain names that register misspellings of legitimate sites or that cycle through country code domain extensions (ccTLDs).

We've blocked thousands of Doppelganger's domains from being shared on our platforms, and continue to report them as part of our regular public threat research. However, many of these websites remain live on the internet. This means that bad actors can continue to run their operation and share links to them elsewhere. The fragmented enforcement ecosystem for malicious domain names enables this operation and others to use redirect links to keep running their campaign across the Internet.

HOW META COUNTERS DOMAIN NAME ABUSE TARGETING OUR BRAND

Because tackling domain name abuse often falls on the brand owners, at Meta, we continue to do everything we can to protect people from abusive domains pretending to be affiliated with Meta. We operate a comprehensive brand enforcement program to identify and take action against imposter sites pretending to be Meta products to deceive people. We do so by scanning new domain names daily for signs of likely fraud, like intentional misspellings of our brands, particularly those that are likely to lead to scams. In 2023 so far, in collaboration with our security enforcement partners at Tracer Ai, we've reported and helped remove over 6,000 abusive domain names targeting Meta brands.

Our anti-phishing program also tackles thousands of off-platform phishing domains targeting Meta brands monthly. In 2022, in collaboration with PhishLabs, we helped take down approximately 140,000 phishing sites, a substantial decrease from over 265,000 in 2021. We believe that this decrease is due to our proactive efforts to discuss collaborative methodologies with hosting and other service providers to reduce impersonations on their services.

INDUSTRY-WIDE CHALLENGES IN TACKLING DOMAIN NAME ABUSE

As each brand owner works to mitigate domain impersonation abuse, there are real challenges in how the wider system for redressing these harms works, limiting what any individual company can do.

For example, today most domain name registration information (known as WHOIS) is not accessible. And even when it is disclosed pursuant to a legitimate request to investigate domain abuse, the information is frequently inaccurate due to lack of verification by registration providers. This inhibits swift investigations into abusive domains and other efforts to prevent harm. In fact, we typically receive the requested WHOIS information related to investigations into abusive behavior targeting people on our services about 35% of the time, according to Tracer Ai.

The inability to access WHOIS information has likely contributed to a steady rise in domain name dispute administrative procedures, known as UDRPs (Uniform Domain-Name Dispute-Resolution Policy), to recover abusive domains. The fees to initiate a UDRP at WIPO (World Intellectual Property Office), for example, can be in the thousands of dollars to recover up to just 10 domain names, in addition to the legal fees. While some brands, like ours, opt to pursue this effort, many may not. This means that imposters continue to operate online, knowing that the costs of taking abusive domains down is prohibitively high for many organizations – including news outlets, civil society organizations, or governments.

Another avenue for protecting people that brands can pursue is domain name litigation. For example, in December 2022, we filed litigation against Freenom, a country code domain registry provider, whose domain names accounted for over half of all phishing attacks involving ccTLDs. Since then, research by Interisle Consulting Group has found significant declines in phishing domains reported in ccTLDs overall. However, since there are more than 2,000 accredited domain registrars, better cooperation is needed to ensure all registrars address abuse from their services. Otherwise, threat actors will continue to flock to less responsible players in the ecosystem.

OUR RECOMMENDATIONS FOR IMPROVING INDUSTRY’S EFFORTS TO TACKLE DOMAIN NAME ABUSE AT SCALE

Domain impersonation is far from being the only cross-platform tactic threat actors use to trick people into visiting fictitious news outlets, falling for phishing schemes, installing malware, or losing money to scammers. But it is an area where existing mechanisms to redress abuse are not sufficient to have material impact at scale. We believe that industry-wide action is needed to protect people against these tactics and raise our collective defenses.

Our recommendations for a stronger society-wide response include:

- Improve ICANN contracts with registrars and registries to take proactive steps to address domain registration abuse at scale, such as to require suspension of customer accounts for known bad actors or impose additional verification for domain names that include a combination of famous brand plus words suggestive of fraud – like “login”, “password”, “security”, “help center”, or “verification. Any such approach would need to account for legitimate criticism (such as BrandXsux[.]com), and be tailored to prevent powerful players from abusing them to silence lawful protest. Encourage the sharing of data with internet platforms to proactively block bad actors from registering and using domain names to further abusive or criminal activities.
- Adopt laws that require complete, accurate, and verified WHOIS data, similar to Europe’s recently revised Network and Information Systems Directive \(NIS2\).
- Incentivize the domain industry to cooperate with those investigating impersonating domain names and scams at scale.

- Disincentivize cybersquatting by shifting costs from brand owners to abusive actors by enhancing the remedies or damages available under the UDRP or applicable law.
- Close DNS governance gaps with strategies to include all participants of the DNS ecosystem such as hosting providers.
- Ensure a balance of security and privacy through multi-stakeholder input and human rights impact assessment to prevent the abuse of anti-fraud systems to silence or expose critics.
- Encourage business and UN entities to adopt remedy and risk management approaches consistent with the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights.

Appendix: Threat indicators

The following section details unique threat indicators that we assess to be associated with malicious networks we disrupted and described in this report. To help the broader research community to study and protect people across different internet services, we've collated and organized these indicators according to the Online Operations Kill Chain framework, which we use at Meta to analyze many sorts of malicious online operations, identify the earliest opportunities to disrupt them, and share information across investigative teams. The kill chain describes the sequence of steps that threat actors go through to establish a presence across the internet, disguise their operations, engage with potential audiences, and respond to takedowns.

We're sharing these threat indicators to enable further research by the open-source community into any related activity across the web. This section includes the latest threat indicators and is not meant to provide a full cross-internet, historic view into these operations. It's important to note that, in our assessment, the mere sharing of these operations' links or engaging with them by online users would be insufficient to attribute accounts to a given campaign without corroborating evidence.

Disguising assets
Visual disguises	Copying profile photos from online sources
	Using profile photos likely generated using artificial intelligence such as Generative Adversarial Networks (GAN)
	Using cartoon images as profile photos
Posting spam as camouflage	Many accounts in this network posted spammy photos or videos of scenery, food or fashion between their political posts, likely to camouflage their strategic goal

Making “personal” comments	Some accounts made “personal” comments alongside the links they shared, likely to appear more individual.
Coordinating and planning
Centralized control, decentralized operators	Our investigation found that the Spamouflage network is run by geographically dispersed operators across China who appear to be centrally provisioned with internet access and content directions
Working in shifts	The operation regularly worked a shift pattern consistent with the working day in the GMT +8 time zone, with breaks for lunch and dinner, and a third shift in the evening
Evading detection
Using proxy internet infrastructure	Dispersed operators repeatedly shared the same proxy internet infrastructure - often in the United States, likely in an attempt to disguise their origins
Dispersing content across many platforms	The network routinely posted the same article many times on many accounts across multiple platforms
Indiscriminate engagement
Posting on forums	The network posted content across dozens of sites and forums
Posting irrelevant replies to unrelated posts	The network sometimes posted its content as replies to other people’s posts, without apparent efforts to make the replies relevant - for example, one Quora account replied to the question “How do I lose belly fat through weight lifting?” with the article “Against Telecom & Online Fraud, Chinese Police Strengthening International Law Enforcement Cooperation”
Posting generic hashtags	The network often used generic hashtags such as #taiwan, #america and #china

Targeted engagement
Posting specific hashtags	The network sometimes used unusual hashtags, some of which it may have created itself, such as: #americanisafailedstate [sic] #americathethief #ThisispureslanderthatChinahaseestablishedasecretpolicedepartmentin England
Paying to promote posts	About $4,000 in spending for ads related to this operation’s activity on Facebook, paid for mostly in Chinese yuan, Hong Kong dollars and US dollars.
Enabling longevity
Replacing accounts	This network is a persistent adversary that replaces its accounts by acquiring new ones from a range of sources
Shifting to smaller platforms	The network has progressively posted more content on smaller platforms and forums, and then shared links onto larger platforms, likely to reduce the impact of enforcement by any one platform.

Unique headlines

This network posted a large number of unique headlines that appear to have been created by its central coordinating body. The following examples are a small sample of its total output. We include them to illustrate the range, quantity, and sometimes poor quality of this network.
